August Blooming Iris
Recent Gift to Garden

Effects with tall stemmed irises are by no means limited to late spring. By introducing into the garden plants of the Japanese variety bold masses of color can be picked up in midsummer.

For years a few of the tall bearded irises have occasionally bloomed again in the fall, a fact well known to seasoned gardeners and one recognized and improved upon by the hybridizers. But the introduction of autumn flowering varieties as a class is fairly recent.

Since some of these late flowering irises begin to bloom in August, plants should be set out in June. Culture is of the simplest and identical with that of earlier blooming varieties. Plant in full sun and in a fairly dry location. The rhizomes are barely covered with soil. Arrangement in the borders is also similar since the most satisfactory results are obtained by grouping in reasonably large masses.

Not so simple is the culture of Japanese irises. It demands a copious amount of moisture during the blooming period.

At the same time, drainage must be good. Stagnant water around the roots may prove to be fatal; ice encrusted roots in winter are almost certain to be. A position in full sun light is essential to healthy growth. In addition, the Japanese iris refuses to tolerate lime. Forewarned with this fact it is advisable at the time of planting to dig into the soil a generous amount of peat moss.

The method of planting differs radically from that used for tall bearded irises. Instead of the roots being lightly covered or even partly exposed, they are buried at least two inches deep. Plants are usually set out in either early spring or September.

Homes Require Adequate, Evenly Distributed Light

A man needs as much light for shaving as his wife does for powdering her nose but their son studying his lessons requires twice as much. If the wife takes up the family mending, the amount of light should be tripled.

Thus advises Mrs. Harriet J. Haynes, home management specialist at Massachusetts State college in a home lighting campaign. Her reports from her research that prolonged sewing requires 50 to 100 foot candles of light, or approximately the illumination shed by a 60-watt lamp at a distance of one foot.

For the children's study table Mrs. Haynes suggests 30 to 50 foot candles of light. And to illuminate those daily attempts at facial beautification, the bathroom mirror and dressing table should have 10 to 30 foot candles.

"Good lighting should be adequate, glareless and evenly distributed," says Mrs. Haynes. "With a well-lighted home, there are no exposed bulbs, and the light is diffused by lamps, globes and shades."

To get "your money's worth" in light, she recommends selecting inside frosted bulbs of the proper voltage for the home, and keeping them clean. "The thrifty home manager will use open-top shades with white or near white linings. She will keep the diffusing bowls clean. Where the bowls have come over, she will remember that white reflects 80 per cent of the light."

Painted Awning Monograms

In many communities the idea of painting your monogram and house number on the awning above the front door is becoming popular. This is particularly recommended in those towns where house numbers are applied to the street curbing and consequently are often obscured by passing traffic. Any skilled painter or decorator can easily apply the letters either with house paint and a hand-brush or by means of a stencil and special stencil set. Any paint dealer can show you how to prepare the latter from japan colors or other materials. Use letters about five inches high and apply them to the lower right hand corner of the awning.

British Plan to Make Rayon Out of Seaweed

LEEDS, YORKSHIRE, ENGLAND.—A method to make rayon from seaweed is announced by Prof. O. B. Speakman, of Leeds university.

Professor Speakman says the seaweed rayon is cheaper to manufacture than the present rayons. He did the research for an unnamed British firm. Production of the new material is expected to start within a month.

SEARS ROEBUCK HAS NEW 1941 COLDSPOTS

For separate "storage pantries" that permit varying degrees of refrigeration within a refrigerator are a feature highlight of the 1941 Coldspot now being exhibited by Sears Roebuck in Lynchburg.

This new method of refrigeration control represents a step forward in the science of food protection and preservation in that different types of foodstuffs are not subjected to identical intensities of cold.

As explained by Mr. R. F. Duncan, manager of the Sears store, where a complete line of these refrigerators is on display, the carefully planned interior of the Coldspot is divided into four zones of cold for the storage of everything from frozen foods to fresh vegetables.

Farm Program Date Is Set

Use of the individual farm plan sheet in planning farm operations will enable Appomattox county farmers to obtain the greatest benefit from their participation in the 1941 AAA Farm Program, according to J. P. Paulette, chairman of the county AAA committee.

April 15 is the final date when a farmer may fill out the farm plan and indicate his intention to participate in the 1941 program. The farm plan, a copy of which will be furnished the farmer, contains valuable information regarding the maximum payment for the soil-building practices, and classification of crops.

In working out his farm plan sheet, each farmer may have the help of a local AAA committeeman or representative of the county committee. The farmer and a committeeman may discuss how the farmer can use the maximum assistance available in order to carry out the soil-building practices most needed on the farm. Taking into account farm allotments, rates of payments, and other factors, the farmer can plan his operations in such a way as to make the greatest use of good farming principles.

Through personal contact with the committeeman, farmers may also become better acquainted with new provisions of the 1941 program. The committeemen are informed on these provisions.

Members of the two organizations will have a joint luncheon, at 6:30 Thursday, March 13, at Mrs. Childress' Tea Room. Attendance at this affair will exceed fifty. With America facing grave decisions in the existing world crisis, the nation sorely needs a rebirth of ultime patriotism. The men scheduled to be here next Thursday night are distinguished Virginians, able speakers, and are alert to the perils facing America and the entire world. It is hoped that all members of the Legion will make C. Randall Hunter at once if they desire a place reserved for them at the luncheon. ## Wonder How This Proposal Will Fare?

The Boys Are Flocking To The Colors

Over 100 men from Appomattox County are now serving in the armed forces of the United States. Definite figures are not available, but the number of county men in some branch of the military service can be deduced from the following data:

Credits (revised) to Appomattox Selective Service Board before retting of call quota, 81; registrants already sent to camp, 81; volunteers (not all of these have been inducted as yet) 18. This adds up to 107. Four more registrants are slated to leave for camp March 26 and March 31, making 111. On top of that a number of reserve officers have been called to active duty and commissioned. Thus by April 1, it is probable that a complete tally would show 120 men in the service.

The tempo of calls is being stepped up, as construction of reception and training camps nears completion.

The Appomattox County Selective Service Board has announced that the following registrants are to leave for military service March 26: Harry Lee Goin and David Wilson Carter. In event one or more of the above may not be inducted at the induction station by the armed forces, the following may be replacements: JohnWesley Harris, William Clinton Childress, Oscar Leonard Robertson, Samuel Lee Page.

The Board also announces that the following will leave March 31: Lacy Jefferson Webb and Howard Sanders. Replacements for the two above are: Ray Dillard Lewis, Clifton Austin, Scott Henry Hubbard, Cris Samuel Austin, Charlie Sherman Austin.

Wonder How This Proposal Will Fare?

The Boys Are Flocking To The Colors

Over 100 men from Appomattox County are now serving in the armed forces of the United States. Definite figures are not available, but the number of county men in some branch of the military service can be deduced from the following data:

Credits (revised) to Appomattox Selective Service Board before retting of call quota, 81; registrants already sent to camp, 81; volunteers (not all of these have been inducted as yet) 18. This adds up to 107. Four more registrants are slated to leave for camp March 26 and March 31, making 111. On top of that a number of reserve officers have been called to active duty and commissioned. Thus by April 1, it is probable that a complete tally would show 120 men in the service.

The tempo of calls is being stepped up, as construction of reception and training camps nears completion.

The Appomattox County Selective Service Board has announced that the following registrants are to leave for military service March 26: Harry Lee Goin and David Wilson Carter. In event one or more of the above may not be inducted at the induction station by the armed forces, the following may be replacements: JohnWesley Harris, William Clinton Childress, Oscar Leonard Robertson, Samuel Lee Page.

The Board also announces that the following will leave March 31: Lacy Jefferson Webb and Howard Sanders. Replacements for the two above are: Ray Dillard Lewis, Clifton Austin, Scott Henry Hubbard, Cris Samuel Austin, Charlie Sherman Austin.

BIRTH

Born to Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Covington, a fine baby girl, Ida Virginia, February 27, 1941.

The cry of "gerrymander" was readied for use here today, as local political eyes were popped all most out of their sockets by a tentative plan for reapportionment of the membership of the Virginia General Assembly was put forward by the Legislative Redistricting Commission. The proposal, as announced in Richmond would not own to tear Appomattox from its political moorings, but would virtually gut a political "Hitaberg", on hero State Senator Charles T. Moses and Delegate John R. Boatwright.

The State Constitution requires a reapportionment of membership in the General Assembly after the federal census each ten years, with membership on a population basis. A Legislative Commission was appointed to work out a redistricting proposal. It is the proposal which has been hatched by this commission that is causing the headaches on local political fronts.

At present State Senator Moses represents the Eleventh Senatorial District, composed of the counties of Appomattox, Charlotte, Buckingham and Cumberland. The new proposal would do away with this district and put Appomattox and Buckingham in with Amherst and Nelson counties in the Fourth Senatorial District, tag Cumberland on to the Ninth District, now represented by Senator Robert K. Brock, and tag Charlotte on to Halifax. That would leave Senator Moses and Senator L. Paul Wailes, of Amherst and Nelson in the same district, and one would have to be eliminated.

In the proposal for redistricting the House of Delegates, John B. Boatwright, who now represents Appomattox and Buckingham, would be blitzed by a similar manoeuvre. Appomattox county would be put in with Amherst county (which is twice its size) and Buckingham county would be put in with Nelson county, now represented by Delegate J. Tinsley Coleman.

The approximate 1940 population of these counties follows:

Appomattox, 9,012

Buckingham, 13,389

Amherst 19,020

Nelson, 16,241.

This proposal is only tentative. A public bearing on it will be held at the State Capital March 17, at 11 A. M. The Commission is headed by State Senator E. R. Fuller, of Richmond. Even if the proposal remained unchanged by the Commission, it would have to run the gauntlet of passing the next session of the General Assembly, and not be effective until 1943 elections.

The object of the reshuffling is to provide additional representation for sections of Virginia which have had extraordinary increases in population in recent years.
